FIGURES AND ACCESSORIES REMINISCENT
OF THE GOLDEN AGE OF G.I. JOE (1964-1976)

Air Force Academy Cadet

The United States Air Force Academy trains the air and space leaders of tomorrow. A four-year institution, the Academy instills in its cadets the core values of the Air Force: integrity first, service before self, and excellence in all you do. The 4,000 men and women at the Academy experience an extensive military program, take a full range of academic courses, and participate in athletic, aviation and airmanship programs. Newly arrived cadets go through a demanding orientation that prepares them, physically and mentally, for the military life on which they are about to embark. Academy graduates receive a Bachelor of Science degree and a commission as a second lieutenant in the United States Air Force. Armed with knowledge, skills and the distinction of being part of America's armed forces, these dedicated officers are ready to serve our country with honor and courage.

American Cadet Alliance Marine

The American Cadet Alliance teaches the history and traditions of the American armed forces to young men and women ages 12 to 18. Formed in 1909, this not-for-profit organization is comprised of the Marine Cadet Brigade, Army Cadet Brigade and Naval Cadet Brigade. The Marine program is the largest of the three.

Volunteer officers teach military history, martial arts, marksmanship, outdoor survival, map and compass reading and much more. As the cadets participate in these classes and exercises, they develop self-confidence, leadership skills and pride in themselves and their country. They also have the opportunity to train with active and reserve members of America's military in the Counterpart Training Program. As the oldest military youth organization in continuous existence in the United States, the American Cadet Alliance helps train today's young people to become tomorrow's leaders.
